Cordélie

Entirely hand-embroidered, Cordélie rugs are the fruit of a long crafting process based on exceptional know-how. A cotton cord is applied on a linen backing using an embroidering hook to draw – as with a pencil – lines and flat planes of geometric compositions.

Important to note
- A fine cotton cord is applied to an extremely robust linen backing, tracing the lines of the Cordélie rugs.
- It is a rare and painstaking embroidery technique.
- As these products are handcrafted, the dimensions provided are indicative only and slight variations may occur from one piece to another.

Care advice
- To preserve your rug we recommend that you apply an anti-stain treatment and have it dry-cleaned regularly. Do not under any circumstances use water-based, deep-steam or bonnet cleaning methods. In the case of spills or splashes, use a dry cloth to absorb as much of the liquid as possible in order to limit its penetration into the fibres. Do not use salt. If you have concerns or questions, please contact your Hermès store.

Designed in 2017 by British duo Barber & Osgerby, this large coffee table originally produced in bronze is now crafted from Hainaut blue stone. With its top hewn by a stone mason in France from a single block, then polished and waxed, the Aes coffee table is reminiscent of a beam or rail and structures the space it inhabits. Its clean, uncluttered lines combined with an ancestral material allow this piece to display the full power of its forms. Beyond its apparent simplicity, the tabletop reveals all the richness of Hainaut blue stone. The mineral traces of 350 million years of history, with its fossils, incrustations and veins, make each table a unique piece.

Important to note

- This polished stone is coated with water-repellent protective wax which reveals its natural color and reflections.
- This sedimentary limestone is formed of fossils of marine organisms that can create natural irregularities and give a speckled appearance to its color. Each table is therefore unique.
- As these products are handcrafted, the dimensions provided are indicative only and slight variations may occur from one piece to another.

Care advice

- For regular cleaning, use mild non-abrasive detergents and a non-abrasive cloth.
- To preserve the water-repellent wax, avoid vigorous rubbing during cleaning.
- Once a year, maintain the protective film by applying a nourishing wax suitable for marbles, stones and rough granite, gently dabbing the surface. Do not use film-forming wax.

Ancelle d'Hermès

Conceived by Danish designer Cecilie Manz, the Ancelle d'Hermès armchair is compellingly direct: its powerful frame in solid wood is combined with a sheet of leather that creates a light and elegant seat. Heir to a Scandinavian tradition that merges robustness with minimalism, this armchair offers an elegant, structured look.

Cadence d'Hermès

Designed by the Studio Hermès, this Mahjong table celebrates an age-old game whilst showcasing the house's know-how. The table consists of a walnut base on which sits the board in leather marquetry of smooth Forever bullcalf. Four drawers with lambskin-sheathed compartments conceal a world of accessories in carefully selected materials.
The tiles in Canaletto walnut and palladium-finish brass are engraved, brushed and coloured, while the counting sticks are crafted from buffalo horn, the racks from palladium-plated brass, the wind marker from ebony, and the dice in ebony and boxwood marquetry.
From cabinetmaking to marquetry, each element bears the signature of exceptional craftsmanship.

A chair with an angular, geometric look, sheathed in leather by Hermès in the 1930s, inspired Jasper Morrison to reinterpret it with a light touch. Making the legs slimmer and revising its proportions, the designer has imbued it with a form of modernity. The exceptional leather sheathing of the seat and backrest were faithfully replicated, as was the glossy, glazed heritage leather developed for this creation. The result is a fusion of history, know-how and contemporary attitude.

Contour d'Hermès

Archetypal, timeless, inviting, the Contour d'Hermès sofa puts textiles in the limelight. Upholstered in a wool and cotton slub canvas, it features discreet references to Hermès' leather-crafting heritage.
The buttons that punctuate the cushioned backrest and the piping that emphasizes its lines are in leather, and the legs hidden under the fabric are also leather sheathed and burnished. The quintessential sofa, just as if it had always existed.

Diapason d'Hermès

Designed by Studio Hermès in the spirit of its modernist heritage, Diapason d'Hermès collection combines materials contrast and formal design strength as an encounter between bridle leather, heritage leather with a warm, natural look and the cooler tones of cold-stamped aluminium, whose vibrations create a play of reflections and light. Craftsmanship is evident in the attention to detail and finishes: the hammered metal and saddle-stitching on the armchair, the leather sheathing on the table and the console table.

Leather bridle	Hammered aluminium		961830M 01

Important to note

- Aluminium is a durable, strong and lightweight metal. It has a particular elasticity that allows the craftsman to strike and deform the material. This raw material, brushed and waxed, matifies over time.
- A living material, leather evolves, softens and develops a patina over time. Hermès uses only the finest, most delicate full-grain leathers. Their highly transparent aniline finish reveals the skin's natural characteristics (grain, wrinkles and veins) and reveals all its uniqueness. This finish enhances the silky feel of the leather and ensures that it ages well with careful use. The reverse side of the chair reveals the flesh of the leather: untreated, it retains a natural, raw appearance that is soft to the touch.
- As these products are handcrafted, the dimensions provided are indicative only and slight variations may occur from one piece to another.

Équilibre d'Hermès

The Équilibre set by British designer Jasper Morrison exudes lightness and simplicity.
On closer inspection, the shapes of these three objects prove to be more complex: a bevelled tabletop, slanted legs, crisp corners on the outside that are rounded on the inside, slatted chair backs crafted from a single piece of wood, and seats with apertures in which a saddle-stitched leather pad fits perfectly for added comfort.

Equis d'Hermès

Sleek, compact design and sophisticated assembly are the signatures of the Equis d'Hermès collection by Rafael Moneo. Ethereal and architectural, the chair and table originally designed in 1961 were not manufactured for the first time until 2016. The tabletop and legs are attached with wooden corner braces, while brushed brass rods structure the piece. The seat and back of the chairs are covered with hand-stitched leather borrowing from Hermès saddlery expertise. Equis means "X" in Spanish, a nod to the origins of the designer as well as the metal structure of the seat and the equestrian world of Hermès.

Karumi

These three seats lay down a challenge for the material. Japanese master craftsmen fashion a heart of carbon fiber for the bamboo bench frame. Tradition meets high tech in this innovative piece that showcases bamboo in a clean, uncluttered design. Karumi is Japanese for "lightness through simplicity". Far from a showy technique and gratuitous form, Portuguese architect Alvaro Siza Vieira delivers here pieces of a modest yet complex architecture inspired by artisanal techniques.

Satellite Tables Les Nécessaires d'Hermès

Product categories / Collections

Important to note

The travertine or Calacatta Viola marble have a matt finish while the onyx and Port-Laurent marble have a glossy finish.

The marble sheets reveal unique veins which are intrinsic to the natural stone (caused by oxidised mineral deposits).

Onyx Velluto is a greyish-blue onyx with hints of beige and white.

The colour of the travertine stone varies from brown to yellow depending on the region.
It is a porous but very hard stone in warm tones with contrasting veins or streaks of colour.
This stone is characterised by the small holes that appear unevenly across its surface.

No two pieces are alike because each stone is unique.

Les Trotteuses d'Hermès

Three heights, three diameters, three porcelain tops with colourful motifs fastened with bridle-leather straps, and a wooden base in solid oak which folds in and out with ease, endow these three small round tables with a nomadic spirit for enhanced versatility. Individually, as a pair, or as a trio, the tables move effortlessly from one space to another around the home.
New top designs are now available for a renewed collection.

Lignage d'Hermès

Human and material, black and white, simplicity and solidity. This blue stone table from Hainaut, Belgium, designed by Studio Mumbai, tells a story of an encounter between raw aesthetics and delicate know-how. It is originally presented black, but when engraved it becomes white, illustrating the direct relationship between the material and the artisan's movements. The stonemason uses a ruler to carefully trace lines onto the tabletop, making them appear like rays of light.

Métiers

Enzo Mari, an Italian architect and designer who strived toward simplicity and timelessness in his work, applied a process of elimination to the Hermès Métiers line, unlocking the essence of each piece of furniture. Keeping only the essentials of functionality and purity of form, the refinement of the Métiers collection lies in the close attention paid to the materials. The softness of smooth bull calf leather brushes up against wood polished until silky to the touch. This collection is an ode to craftsmen practising different trades or "métiers": from stone masons to upholsterers, leather workers, saddlers, cabinet-makers or carpenters.

Important to note

- The marble sheets reveal unique veins which are intrinsic to the natural stone (caused by oxidised mineral deposits).
- Onyx Velluto is a greyish-blue onyx with hints of beige and white.
- The colour of the Travertine stone varies from brown to yellow depending on the region. It is a porous but very hard stone in warm tones with contrasting veins or streaks of colour. This stone is characterised by the small holes that appear unevenly across its surface.
- No two pieces are alike because each stone is unique.
- As these products are handcrafted, the dimensions provided are indicative only and slight variations may occur from one piece to another.

Care advice

- To clean spills or stains, prepare a mix of rubbing alcohol (70°) and water in the following proportions: 80% alcohol, 20% water.
- Soak a clean, soft cotton cloth in the alcohol solution, then wring out the excess and gently rub along the table surface. Use a clean, dry cloth to finish.

Oria d'Hermès

The Oria d'Hermès armchair and chair by Rafael Moneo were designed in three dimensions, striking a balance between style and sobriety.
The skill of the craftsman shines through in the natural oak frame, H bull calf leather back and traditional cane seat.

Pippa

The Pippa line was imagined by Rena Dumas in the Hermès spirit of "moving with elegance". It combines the warmth and softness of wood (pearwood or maplewood) with the suppleness and resilience of leather (natural cowhide or Clémence bull calf leather).

Designer Rena Dumas, French interior designer, 1937-2009

Jean-Michel Frank furniture designs by Hermès

Jean-Michel Frank (1895 - 1941), a figurehead of the decorative arts, was the most influential designer and decorator of the 1920s and 1930s. With his "modest luxury" style – a precursor to minimalism – he stripped away any superfluous decoration in search of simplicity. His spaces invited meditation. His lines were rigorous, his forms simple, his materials natural or sophisticated.
In 1924, Jean-Michel Frank met Jean-René Guerrand, son-in-law of Émile Hermès, and commissioned him to upholster his comfortable armchairs and sofas. Their partnership was to last the rest of the designer's lifetime. With Jean-Michel Frank, Hermès pushed the envelope of its saddlery and harness-making expertise to upholster pieces of furniture and wall coverings. These re-releases of those timeless minimalist pieces – identical to the originals – are crafted with exceptional expertise in tapestry and upholstery.

This organically shaped seat is inspired by far away places. Its generous proportions have been designed by architects at Studio Mumbai. Its structure is composed of wood, while its coating is a unique compound containing cellulose microfibers made in Puglia, Italy, the 16th century-birthplace of papier mâché. Striking the perfect balance between material innovation and ancestral know-how, this robust yet sensual totem armchair – varnished and hand-painted one line after the other – creates an intimate relationship with the material.

Important to note
- Varnished and hand-painted line by line.
- Papier-mâché is very vulnerable to knocks, scratches and acids.
- As these products are handcrafted, the dimensions provided are indicative only and slight variations may occur from one piece to another.

Care advice
- Wiping down the surfaces of the armchair with a soft, dry cloth is the only daily maintenance required. If the stain persists, do not hesitate to contact your Hermès store.
- We recommend that you avoid using abrasive or corrosive products. Papier-mâché is a fragile material, vulnerable to variations in humidity and temperature: avoid exposing it to heat, humidity or bright light, which could alter its colour and cause it to develop tiny cracks. It is also likely to be damaged by hard knocks or objects with sharp edges, such as the rivets on jeans.
- This Armchair is not designed for outdoor use.

Sofa Sellier

The association of Hermès the saddle-maker and furniture goes back to 1924, when French interior designer Jean-Michel Frank called on the house to create sleek leather coverings for sofas and chairs. Continuing this narrative, the Sellier sofa makes more than one reference to the house's equestrian heritage in an archetypal, modular piece whose design is led by a quest for ingenuity and surprises that delight as they reveal themselves. Materials and métiers come together: the cabinetmaking, the upholstery, and caning. Within the harmony there are surprising cadences: like the interior of a carriage, this sofa has hidden pockets and compartments designed for the ease and pleasure of its owner; the saddlebags on the side of the armrest include pockets for magazines and the caned screen shelters a leather-covered box of secrets.

Important to note

- Wicker woven by hand. In order to produce a perfectly smooth finish on the wickerwork, some strands are burned off and this causes slightly black marks.
- Internal structure of the seat cushions: metal springs and goose feather down filling.
- If the cushion appears to flatten over time, simply plump it up a bit so the feather filling expands again.
- As these products are handcrafted, the dimensions provided are indicative only and slight variations may occur from one piece to another.

Care advice

- For the piece to retain its quality over time, it should be cleaned with a soft cloth and any spills should be wiped off immediately using a clean, absorbent cloth.
- If you have any other queries about furniture care, please contact Hermès Customer Service.

Tray holder Tray-Tôt

Product categories / Collections

Tray holder or occasional table
Tray and folding base in oak or Canaletto walnut.
Straps in bridle leather or hunter cowhide.
Handles in bridle leather affixed with metal saddle nails.

Designer: Studio Hermès
Made in Italy

+ This piece gets its name from a play on the French word for trestles, “tréteaux” – the wooden (or metal) stands used to support a table or a stage. A small tweak to its spelling brought in the English word “tray”, a reference to the upper part of the piece.

Coulisse

To create these table lamps which combine sculpture and functionality, designer Tomás Alonso assembles simple geometric shapes such as circles, rectangles, and triangles in an interplay of space and lightness. For this project, the Spanish designer took a craft-based design approach: an exceptionally light yet resistant bamboo frame/screen, a circle in copper-covered steel, and simple, visible technical components like stage lights painted in black come together to merge into the background and draw attention to the setting.

Halo

Creating the Halo table lamp in Limoges porcelain is a complicated endeavor for the artisans who must produce its lampshade by combining volume and perfect finesse. This object, designed by the British duo Edward Barber & Jay Osgerby, embodies a play on material and light. Its archetypal shape, combining rigour and purity, is livened up by a pumpkin leather cable clad.

Hécate

Mineral and minimalist, the Hécate table lamp was created by British designers Edward Barber & Jay Osgerby. It takes its name from the goddess embodying the new moon, the black moon. Crafted from black granite, an exceptionally dense telluric material which requires the aid of diamond-tipped drills for it to be carved, this classically-shaped object absorbs light to let it only filter through a controlled circle. It is a highly studied piece whose pumpkin leather cable clad adds a touch of whimsy.

+ Hecate, the goddess of the moon in Greek mythology, symbolises mystery and the night.
+ Granite is twice as hard as marble, making it a material that is extremely complicated to work with. Its deep black colour means that it naturally absorbs light, giving a different and complementary approach to the Halo lamp in porcelain.

The name of this collection has not been chosen at random. Like the reins on a harness that connect horse and rider, those of the lamps in this collection connect the base to the shade. It is a marriage of saddle-stitched leather and opaline glass fixed with three "clou de selle" studs. The cables, which are completely hidden in leather sheathes, are the invisible testimony to finishing taken to the extreme. The sophistication of savoir-faire.

Lanterne d'Hermès

Yann Kersalé drew inspiration from the nautical world in creating the Lanterne d'Hermès. It is reminiscent of lighthouses and navigation lighting. He also dove deep into Hermès' past, exploring the era of horse-drawn carriages, which were also equipped with lanterns in both the front and back. The French visual artist has thus created for Hermès a lighting tool that exudes poetry and fantasy. This portable lantern is an invitation to travel, and is ideal for both indoor and outdoor use. It illuminates the traveller's way, shedding light on his path from four light sources.

Pantographe

The tool for drawing known as the pantograph has given its name to this collection of lights.
Like the architect's instrument that serves to reduce or enlarge a picture, this collection owes its originality to the articulated stems and arms that make up the bodies of its three lights. The lights are agile and follow the hand to illuminate every gesture.
Covered in leather and metal, the lighting elements are reminiscent of whips and an equestrian world.
The finishes are exquisite, carefully-considered, and highly sophisticated. The base becomes a trinket tray, the wiring is hidden and electric cables are covered in leather. Meticulous attention has been given to detail.

Pirouette d'Hermès

In the soft evening light, Pirouette d'Hermès awakens without a sound. Inspired by carriage lanterns, this bedside lamp straight out of an equestrian fairy tale unveils a double play. Nightlight on one side, reading lamp on the other thanks to its Fresnel lens that focuses the light, it is the perfect companion for quiet evenings and imaginative storytimes alike. Combining natural materials including smooth bullcalf, bentwood and cork, its rounded interlocking components are also articulated. With its graphic, colourful lines, the mischievous horse designed by Jochen Gerner and screen-printed on the glass seems to come to life after nightfall.
And, before drifting off to sleep, one might almost hear it whispering a story...

A lampshade made of writing paper and a structure in full H bull calf leather, beautifully saddle-stitched. In 1996, Jean-Michel Sarazin, an artisan in the trunks workshop, took the emblematic materials and know-how of Hermès and designed a table lamp. This is a study in style, a timeless creation that has now been reborn, and is available in a small and large size.

Souffle d'Hermès

The Souffle d'Hermès lights by Finnish designer Harri Koskinen are objects for contemplation. Exploring the material nature of glass, they are equally fascinating whether switched on or off. They fulfil a function, assert their familiarity and transparency, and embody simplicity and strength. In aubergine, fougère or orange brûlé, these lights express the magic of the glass blower's art.

Important to note

- Because of the material itself and the lamp manufacturing process, small bubbles can become trapped in the glass, making each piece unique.
- As these products are handcrafted, the dimensions provided are indicative only and slight variations may occur from one piece to another.

Care advice

- Before cleaning any bulb or lamp, be sure to turn them off and let them cool down to avoid any risk.
- To preserve the quality of the light fixture over time, it should be cleaned with a soft cloth and any splashes should be cleaned immediately with a clean absorbent cloth.
- To preserve the shine of glass parts, wipe them with a soft, lint-free cloth dampened with warm water. To avoid leaving any marks, use a microfiber cloth.
- For any other maintenance request or spare part, please contact Hermès Customer Service.

Voltige d'Hermès

Lunge reins, riding crop and show-jumping poles... This new line of lamps has a distinctly equestrian identity with a slender stem in braided two-tone leather, a shade in slub linen with leather piping and a patinated base with a bronze-style finish. Understated and unique, it plays with textures, materials and colours.

Brass

Metals / Collections

+ Ductile - Non-ferrous - Robust
+ Appearance: glossy
+ Strengths: corrosion resistant
+ Evolution over time: its shine will evolve over time; a thin layer of natural oxidation will appear to give it a unique patina
+ Care: to preserve the shine of the brass elements, wipe them with a soft, lint-free cloth. Alternatively, a soft sponge soaked in soapy water can be used, followed by a quick wipe down of the surface with a microfibre cloth to avoid drying marks and scratches
